NATIONAL MONUMENT—OREGON

The Oregon Caves National Monument, located in the heart of the Siskiyou Mountains, 4,000 feet above sea level, covers an area of 480 acres. It was established as a national monument in 1909, under the Department of Agriculture, and by Executive order was transferred to the jurisdiction of the National Park Service in 1934. The monument is administered by the superintendent of the Crater Lake National Park.

The walls of the underground chambers of Jewel Cave are lined with a unique solid coating of dog-tooth calcite crystals which sparkle like jewels in the light; hence the name, Jewel Cave. Because of this unique formation and attractive range of color, the cave and a small protective surface area were set aside as a national monument by Presidential proclamation on February 7, 1908. The National Park Service is responsible for its administration and protection. The cave is available for the visitor to see and at the same time it is preserved in as nearly a natural state as possible.

HOW TO REACH THE MONUMENT

The cave is located in the Black Hills near the southwestern boundary of South Dakota adjacent to U. S. Highway No. 16 leading west to Yellowstone National Park.

It is accessible from the following railroad stations: Custer, S. Dak., and Newcastle, Wyo., both on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad.

HISTORY

Jewel Cave is a small but interesting cavern. The area was originally recorded as a mining claim, known as the Jewel Lode, after its discovery by two prospectors, Albert and F. W. Michaud, on August 18, 1900.

While out prospecting, the Michaud brothers were attracted by the noise of wind coming from a small hole in the limestone cliffs on the east side of Hell Canyon. In the hope of discovering valuable minerals, and locating the source of the wind, these men, in company with Charles Bush, enlarged the opening.

The Michaud brothers believed that they had discovered a cave which would be of great inter-
